FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE—

The Marine Corps Educational Center

BY BRIG. GEN. E. W. SNEDEKER, USMC,
Director

THE Marine Corps Educational Center is the academic division of the Marine Corps Schools. It provides most of the formal professional officer training conducted by the Marine Corps. It is located at Quantico, Va., home of the Marine Corps Schools since their establishment in 1921.

(Major companion agency to the Educational Center, administered and co-ordinated by the same parent headquarters, is the Marine Corps Development Center.)

The mission of the Educational Center, as prescribed by the Commandant of the Marine Corps, is "to train officers in the tactics and techniques of warfare, with particular emphasis on amphibious operations, in order to provide competent commanders and staff officers for the field forces of the Marine Corps." It is to be noted that the primary emphasis is placed on amphibious operations. This is natural, of course, from the amphibious mission of the Marine Corps.

In carrying out its mission, the Educational Center conducts schools and courses designed to prepare Marine Corps officers at successive stages in their careers for the duty assignments they can expect to receive in the years following their training at Quantico. At the initial level are screening and preparatory courses for officer candidates, followed by a thorough and practical basic course, including considerable field work, for all newly commissioned lieutenants before their first assignment to duty with troops.

At progressively higher levels are general and technical courses for captains, majors, lieutenant colonels and colonels. At the top level of the Marine Corps educational structure is the Advanced Research Group composed of several Marine colonels, which provides opportunity for advanced study and original research.

Marine Corps emphasis on formal training for officers is reflected in the large enrollment in the schools of the Educational Center. During 1953 resident instruction will be conducted for several thousand officer candidates and officer students. The faculty, training devices and equipment, demonstration troops, and administrative support are designed and administered to insure that

Study Reveals Unequal Death Benefits; Urges New Pay System for Survivors

The Defense Department will ask Congress to revise jumbled legislation which now makes it possible for a widow of a Reserve officer killed on active duty to receive more than six times as much in survivor benefits as paid to the widow of a Regular officer of identical rank and service.

A preliminary draft of a new Survivor Benefits Bill—it could affect every individual in the Armed Forces—now is under high-level study at the Pentagon.

Aside from the obvious inequities in current death benefits for U. S. servicemen, Defense officials are concerned because of the serious morale factor involved in a situation where men of equal rank serving together—possibly against the Communists in Korea—know that their survivors will not receive comparable benefits.

The only reason why there has not been a louder howl is the fact that few people, in or out of Service, realize the full impact of the sliding scale of death benefits.

It is now possible, however, to throw a strong light on the hitherto obscured data. If the Pentagon should delay in its remedial proposal, a Congressional inquiry is believed probable.

THE JOURNAL has learned of a new Defense Department study which gives this illuminating example of survivor benefits' discrimination against widows of Regular officers.

Two colonels, one a Regular and one a Reserve officer, are killed in the same plane crash under identical orders. Under present law, the widow of the Regular colonel receives $167.90 for 10 years ($92.90 of this amount is from the gratuitous $10,000 indemnity policy for all personnel) and only $75 per month thereafter until death or remarriage.

The Reserve colonel's widow receives $476.11 per month until death or remarriage.

This means that 10 years after the crash which killed their husbands, the Regular's widow would be receiving less than one-sixth the amount of benefits paid to a Reservist's widow.

This distorted scale of benefits results from the fact that the Reservist's widow receives benefits under the Federal Employees Compensation Act, whereas the Regular's widow receives survivor benefits from the Veterans Administration.

The Pentagon study, its contents "admittedly controversial in that it advocates the future elimination of some benefits of long standing," remarks that in the case of two lieutenant colonels with identical service, except for their components, the estimated money difference which would be paid to their widows is more than $55,000 in favor of the widow of the Reservist.

THE JOURNAL has reported previously, instances where Reserve officers have

NEW SURVIVORS PLAN

The plan now under study would provide benefits for survivors of all categories of active duty personnel, including Regular and Reserve, as follows:

DEATH GRATUITY. Continue 6 months' death gratuity but with minimum of $1,200 and maximum of $3,000.

SERVICE COMPENSATION. A permanent monthly benefit, until widow dies or remarries, equal to 80% of first $100 of basic pay plus 40% of balance, with a minimum monthly payment of $100.

SOCIAL SECURITY. All Service members drawing basic pay to be put into Social Security on a full membership basis.

FECA BENEFITS. Discontinue in new cases.

Army Sets Boards To Select Temp. Captains-Majors; First In Two Years

(Permanent Promotion Boards—Page 788)

The Army announced this week that selection boards—first in two years—will meet this month to recommend officers for temporary promotion to captain and major.

Detailed criteria are revealed in Circular No. 14, 26 Feb. The complete text of this announcement is published below.

At the same time, it was announced that outstanding second lieutenants must now serve 12 months instead of 9 months, before they can be recommended for promotion to first lieutenant.

Normal service in grade is 18 months.

The additional three months were added, it was explained, because of the fact that the ninth months period did not afford ample time for accumulation of adequate records on which the recommendations could be evaluated.

The selection boards to name officers for temporary captain and major are expected to take at least two months to complete their work.

At the present time, there are no names on eligible lists for line officer

Launch Officer Act Inquiry At Capitol

With repeal of the Davis Amendment now certain before its 1 April effective date, the House Armed Services Committee this week launched its inquiry into the Officer Personnel Act of 1947.

At an opening executive session on 5 March, the special subcommittee headed by Representative Leslie C. Arends (R-Ill.) indicated that the study would embrace only the temporary promotion provisions of the OPA, although inevitably other aspects of the complex act will be touched upon.

The hearings on the OPA result from the legislation substituted by Chairman Dewey Short (R-Mo.) in place of the Davis Amendment. Mr. Short's bill promises a detailed study of the Officer Personnel Act.

The Senate Armed Services Committee early this week reported out favorably and unanimously the substitute legislation and its passage was seen as momentary of THE JOURNAL went to press.

Aside from the important results that the substitute legislation will prevent the demotion of some 5,400 Navy lieutenants and permit hundreds of delayed officer promotions in the other services, there is another essential conclusion to be reached from the recent action on Capitol Hill.

It has been made clear that the Armed Services Committees will not again permit the Appropriations Committees to take control of promotion programs through hastily enacted riders.

Where changes are necessary in the Officer Personnel Act to meet new conditions and possibly to impose tighter controls, this will be done, promises Chairman Dewey Short (R-Mo.) of the House Armed Services Committee. But he and his colleague, Representative Carl Vinson (D-Ga.), former chairman, emphasize that legislative action by appropriations rider has produced unfortunate results in the Armed Services.

The Arends Subcommittee took up its work after the House had voted 370-0 to replace the Davis Amendment which set percentage ceilings on officer ranks with numerical limitations on ranks above captain in the Army, Air Force and Marine Corps and lieutenant in the Navy.

UNIFIED BLOOD DRIVE

An American National Red Cross blood drive held in Raleigh, N. C., was an effort in unification.

The Army and Air Force ROTC at North Carolina State College sponsored the blood drive and the Naval Reserve Training Center at Raleigh was set up as the receiving station for blood donors. On 19 & 20 Feb., 553 pints of blood were collected, of which 460 pints were from ROTC students and members of the Armed Forces.

Fighter Bombers Hit Red Center in North

Allied fighter-bombers, taking advantage of good weather after several days of rain and heavy clouds, dropped tons of bombs and high explosives on two Red centers near Manchuria, flattening the target areas and touching off an aerial clash in which Sabre jets downed one MIG and damaged five more.

According to the Fifth Air Force, one group of Thunder jets pasted a Communist communications center south of Kohandong, only three miles south of the Yalu River. One 400-foot-long communications center and 11 other buildings were leveled, and three others damaged. In the week's second raid on the Chusan training center, 30 miles east of the Red Air Force base at Antung, Manchuria, another Thunder jet group wrecked 17 buildings.

The "probably shot down" enemy MIG was credited to Col. Royal N. Baker, leader of the Fourth Interceptor Group and the top United States jet ace now flying in Korea. His score now is 10 MIG's and one propeller-driven plane shot down, one MIG probably destroyed and another MIG damaged.

Off the east coast, the Seventh Fleet flagship, Missouri, sailed 140 miles north of the 38th parallel and fired 16-inch shells into Communist coastal positions. On the ground, four Allied raiding parties stabbed at Red positions in the Kumhwa sector on the central front, leaving 40 Chinese dead or wounded.

Earlier in the week, Eighth Army headquarters reported 70 Communist troops were killed and as many more wounded during three United Nations probes along the western front. About the same number of enemy were killed elsewhere along the front by artillery fire and small arms. Sabre jets, screening fighter-bombers which attacked an enemy supply area north of T-Bone Hill, and raided an enemy concentration area southwest of Wonsan, encountered enemy fighters in MIG Alley and damaged two of them before the fighting ceased.

In furious air strikes that blistered enemy centers across the entire Korean peninsula and up one side and down the other, fighter-bombers rained 120 tons of high explosives on three supply dumps, turning them into a mass of wreckage and fire. "Smoke billowed up over the entire target," said Lieutenant F. F. Hathaway, a bombardier. The heaviest air attack was on Chusan, which was attacked without enemy opposition.

The heavy cruiser Los Angeles, stepping up the pace of the Navy's longest siege in history, crept into the harbor of Wonsan and blasted the important east coast port with 8-inch shells. With Navy carrier planes serving as "eyes," the Los Angeles pumped shells at Wonsan's guns and storage areas.

On Sunday, bad weather set in and air battles tapered off. Deeply entrenched South Koreans, dug in on the east-central front near Capitol Hill, beat off an attacking Communist Chinese company of 150 men, killing 31 troops. Although supported by 1,000 rounds of mortar and artillery fire, the enemy was driven back in less than an hour.

United States casualties in Korea rose to 129,336 for the period through midnight 27 February, the Department of Defense announced this week.

The total figure includes 23,069 killed, 94,863 wounded and 11,404 missing. Broken down into the various services, the figures are:

Army—18,920 killed; 71,785 wounded and 87 missing; Navy—366 killed, 1,387 wounded and 87 missing; Marine Corps—3,284 killed, 21,649 wounded and 504 missing; Air Force—499 killed, 42 wounded and 839 missing.

Army Emergency Relief Has 6 Sections in Europe

At request of the Commander-in-Chief, U. S. Army, Europe an AER Branch was established for that command early in December. AER Sections have been opened and are now in operation at Headquarters USAREUR (Heidelberg); Frankfurt; Munich; Stuttgart; Nurnberg and Kaiserlautern.

It is planned to open other Sections soon in Berlin and Bremerhaven, Germany, and in Orleans, LaRoche and Verdun in France.

With the establishment of an AER Branch in Europe with Sections located throughout Germany and France, AER funds are now immediately available to assist members of U. S. Army Europe and their families in times of need and distress.

The presence of these AER Sections overseas insures timely emergency financial assistance on a personal and fraternal basis to Army personnel and their families whenever for any reason assistance by the Red Cross is not available. AER funds are contributed largely by members of the Army in a campaign conducted once each year.

Medals Held In Pawn Hurt Allies' Goodwill

A delicate international medal and awards pawn problem has drawn careful but forceful protest from U. S. military leaders, particularly from combat commanders in Korea.

They insist that something must be done to prevent continued embarrassment to members of the Armed Forces and to the Government they represent. These officials say that unless remedial legislation is passed by Congress—which naturally would expect the Defense Department and State Department to carry the ball—much good will built up in the side-by-side struggle of UN fighting comrades in Korea will be jeopardized.

U. S. military personnel have no alternative now but to be made to appear that they are slighting nations which have seen fit to honor them.

It's a problem which affects the State Department and Defense Department. The White House has been involved in the past; it is conceivable that with President Eisenhower's fine feeling for the necessity of cordial relations among military men of allied nations, he will take the initiative and use the influence of his office to solve what is becoming an increasingly aggravating problem.

Top Level Example

Here is one top-level example of why U. S. military leaders are disturbed because they must immediately remove medals awarded them by a foreign government:

Before leaving his post as Eighth Army commander in Korea to return to the U. S. for retirement on 31 March, General James A. Van Fleet had received numerous decorations from foreign governments.

But the plain fact is that notwithstanding the sincerity of the tributes from UN member nations and General Van Fleet's certain pride in these awards, he was required by law to turn them over to the State Department.

Not since 25 July 1948 has it been possible for a member of the U. S. Armed Forces to retain possession of decorations from foreign nations without specific Congressional approval in each individual case.

During World War II, legislation was passed which gave blanket authority for the wearing of decorations presented by allied nations. But this authority was repealed by Public Law 239 of the 80th Congress.

Subsequently, new legislation to permit acceptance of decorations—particularly from nations honoring the service of U. S. officers and enlisted men in Korea—has been prepared but never acted upon.

4,000 Medals In Pawn

A recent inventory disclosed that the State Department now is holding more than 4,000 awards to members of the Armed Forces.

From commanders in Korea, increasing reports are reaching the Pentagon of embarrassment and sometimes resentment by officials of other nations because U. S. personnel, after being decorated, must remove the awards from their uniforms and send them to Washington—the certificates as well as the medals.

Thus, for example, it happens that a U. S. officer is decorated by a representative of another UN nation fighting against the Communists, but upon a second meeting with the person who presented the medal is unable to wear it. Despite the realization that this is a requirement of U. S. law and is not intended as a slight, it is inevitably regarded as such on some occasions, according to reports sent to Washington.

British Must Have Assurance

There is also the complicating factor that the British have a long tradition of never presenting a medal until assured that it will be accepted. This assurance cannot be given by U. S. personnel, since Congress must authorize the wearing of medals from foreign nations.

Therefore, the British present no medals to our forces in Korea, and consequently, U. S. commanders cannot decorate British forces for heroic action against the Communists.

What is advocated by U. S. military leaders in Korea and at the Pentagon is legislation similar to the blanket authority voted for World War II.

In the past, such proposals have been kicked around by the Defense Department, State Department and Bureau of the Budget with no energetic support of corrective legislation.

The problem came into some notice about a year ago with regard to certain decorations awarded to former President Truman's military aide, Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughn, USAR-Ret. Legislation reportedly was held up because of the publicity.

But whatever the merits of any particular case, the fact remains, say Pentagon authorities, that the U. S. Government and U. S. fighting men are being embarrassed because of current restrictions on accepting awards from foreign nations.

SECRETARY SHORTAGE

The new Administration is still short on civilian Secretaries for the Armed Services. Although the top Secretaries and Under Secretaries have been appointed for all three Services, there still remain open four Assistant Secretaryships: two in the Army, one in the Air Force and one in the Navy.

Fourth Inter-Service Photography Contest

The Fourth Inter-Service Photography Contest, conducted jointly by the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps and Coast Guard, will be held at the Pentagon in Washington, D. C., on or about 15 May.

The contest is designed to interest the amateur and beginning photographer and to encourage participation in photographic activities by Service personnel. The Perpetual Inter-Service Photography Trophy, donated by THE JOURNAL, is awarded annually to the Service with the greatest number of prize-winning entries.

Individual trophies are awarded to seven winners in black and white competition and to three winners in color transparencies competition. In addition, a trophy is awarded to the most popular entry in the show. The winner of this prize is determined by public ballot at the conclusion of the first week of exhibition in the Pentagon concourse.

Black and white photographs and color transparencies taken since 1 Jan. 1951 will be eligible for competition. They must have been taken by the individual contestant. Also, each contestant is encouraged to develop, print and enlarge his own black and white photographs.

The Navy announced recently that it has designated a screening board to select the ten best entries from the Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard for final competition in the contest. Each of these contestants will receive a certificate of achievement signed by the Secretary of Defense. At the same time, the Navy noted that all Marine Corps and Coast Guard entries will be submitted through Navy channels.

"RECENT ADVANCES IN SURGERY" were discussed at a meeting of the 38th Parallel Medical Society at I Corps Headquarters in Korea. Six visiting surgeons looked at nearly 600 wounds on a tour of hospitals in the Eighth Army. They found that wounds are treated better in this war; infection is less; the helicopter bringing medical help more quickly and more blood being available deal with wound-shock better.

Manpower and Housing Nat. Guard Problems

Two major problems facing the National Guard today are the recruitment and training of new members, and providing housing for units that already exist, Maj. Gen. William H. Harrison, jr., of Mass., outgoing president of the Adjutants General Association, declared at the Association's annual conference 23-25 Feb. at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.

"For perhaps the first time in our history," General Harrison said, "we have found the problem of recruiting and training the National Guard embarrassed and encumbered by a vast variety of conflicting factors. Some of these derive from the general situation; others acquire impetus from the alluring appeal which active service provides for those in our ranks to whom the military career presents a challenge. Other factors are the immediate consequence of legislation and policies which have shut off heretofore abundant sources of manpower for the National Guard."

Compares Reserves

General Harrison declared that "while the champions of the Army Reserve are asking for funds to build armories for organizations, many of which are hardly of cadre strength, and which on the basis of National Guard experience have little hope of ever emerging from that status, the Adjutants General of the various states are confronted with the problem of housing for units that actually exist, that are equipped, armed and trained."

"The problem posed by these," he added, "is real. This is no paper army. Unless these units train under proper conditions, morale deteriorates, enlistments fall off, and the Guard suffers. In my own state, the overcrowded conditions of our armories are a distinct threat to the future of the organizations involved."

Gen. Fox President

General Harrison was succeeded as president of the Association by Brig. Gen. Charles R. Fox of W. Va. Other officers elected were: vice-president, Maj. Gen. Thomas E. Riles, Ore.; secretary-treasurer, Brig. Gen. Rhodolph L. Esmay, Wyo.; executive committee, Maj. Gen. Earle M. Jones, Calif.; Brig. Gen. Joe Nickell, Kans.; Brig. Gen. William H. Kelly, N. Y.; and Maj. Gen. Harrison, who was named to the committee under a new amendment to the Association's constitution which automatically makes all past presidents members of the committee.

Selected as the meeting place for the 1954 conference was Sante Fe, N. Mex. Maj. Gen. Raymond H. Fleming (ret.), former chief of the National Guard Bureau, was unable to attend the conference. The address he prepared was delivered by Maj. Gen. Earl T. Ricks, acting chief of the Bureau.

Short on Pilots

In reviewing the Air Force division of the Guard, General Fleming asserted that the most important task facing the Air National Guard is the procurement of pilots, a condition which he predicted would be alleviated somewhat through the aviation cadet training program. He also declared that the Air Guard suffers from an acute shortage of aircraft, and he soberly warned members that little hope existed of getting additional craft until at least the middle of the 1954 fiscal year.

He said that the $128,000,000 appropriation requested for the coming fiscal year by the Air Guard would cover construction and rehabilitation of facilities, supplies and equipment, pay and allowances essential for proper training, operation and maintenance of the Air Guard, and the support and equipping of 27 Wings and 85 Flying Squadrons comprising a total of 519 units.

Other speeches delivered during the conference were by Col. Clayton E. Hughes, Chief of the Air O & T Branch; Lieutenant Col. J. O. Wellborn, Chief of Program and Requirements, Air Force Division, NGB; and Lt. Col. Raymond A. Nelson, NGB.

Maj. Gen. O'Donnell to be Personnel Chief; Lt. Gen. Kuter Goes to Air Univ.

General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Air Force Chief of Staff, has revealed that Lt. Gen. Laurence S. Kuter, Deputy Chief of Staff, Personnel, will replace Lt. Gen. Idwal H. Edwards as CG of the Air University at Maxwell AFB, Ala.

Maj. Gen. O'Donnell

Simultaneously, it was reported that Maj. Gen. Emmett "Rosie" O'Donnell, who has been commander of the 15th Air Force at March AFB, Calif., will become DCS, Personnel. This will mean a third star for General O'Donnell, 46, a 1928 graduate of the Military Academy who returned to West Point as football coach from 1934 to 1938.

General Kuter, who will be 48 on 28 May, is a 1927 graduate of the U. S. Military Academy. He was the first commander of the Military Air Transport Service in 1948 and in October 1951 was named DCS, Personnel.

At the Air University, General Kuter will supervise the Air Force educational system, which now serves more than 200,000 students in all parts of the world.

He moves to the new assignment following the 28 Feb. retirement of General Edwards, 58, after 35 years service and 5 years in the permanent grade of major general.

It was at a retirement parade for General Edwards that General Vandenberg made the surprise announcement of Gen. Kuter's new assignment.

"General Kuter has been here at the Air University with me both as an instructor and as a student," said the Chief of Staff. "He was selected because of his outstanding background and ability. He knows the background of the Air University and is a most worthy successor to General Edwards."

"We're entrusting to General Kuter the future of the Air Force," said General Vandenberg, "for it is here at the Air University that we either make or break the Air Force."

Announcement of the new post for General Kuter came as a particular surprise, since an Air Force press release on 26 Feb. reporting the retirement of General Edwards stated that no successor had been named.

General Edwards, like General Kuter, a former Deputy Chief of Staff, Personnel (August 1947-March 1950) was made commander of the Air University on 28 July 1951 after service as DCS, Operations, at USAF Headquarters. He replaced General George C. Kenney, USAF-Ret.

At the Maxwell AFB ceremonies on 28 Feb., General Edwards was presented a second cluster to the Distinguished Service Medal by General Vandenberg.

General O'Donnell, who, in 1947, was the first public relations chief of the newly established Air Force Headquarters, was made CG of the 15th Air Force at Colorado Springs, Colo., in August 1948 and on 7 Nov. 1949 moved with the headquarters to March AFB, Calif.

When the Reds struck in Korea, General O'Donnell was ordered to the Far East with a nucleus of the 15th Air Force staff to organize the Far East Bomber Command, which he led until returning to the U. S. in January 1951.

General O'Donnell won the DSC in Korea, which recalls that two days after the outbreak of WWII, he won an earlier DFC for his single B-17 attack against a Japanese cruiser and destroyer escort in the Philippines.

General O'Donnell was in the Philippines having led the first squadron of B-17 Flying Fortresses across the Pacific. He was forced to evacuate to Java and later to India.

Organization Study Of Dept. Underway

The Committee on Department of Defense Organization, headed by Mr. Nelson A. Rockefeller, this week began its task of studying organizational and procedural problems in the Defense Department.

Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson told the Rockefeller Committee he regards them as his "confidential advisers."

With the concurrence of Secretary Wilson, Mr. Rockefeller has asked General of the Army George C. Marshall, Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, and General Carl Spaatz, USA-Ret., to serve as Senior Military Consultants to the Committee.

At the same time, it was announced that former Assistant Secretary of the Navy H. Struve Hensel will be Counsel to the Committee, with Mr. Don K. Price as Staff Director and Mr. Ralph O. Moore as Secretary.

A Pentagon announcement said the Committee will endeavor to complete its work and submit its recommendations to Secretary Wilson by 30 April.

General Marshall's status as a consultant means that the Committee will have the benefit of the experience of two former Secretaries of Defense, since Mr. Robert A. Lovett is a member.

Other members are Dr. Milton S. Eisenhower, Dr. Arthur S. Flemming, Brig. Gen. David Sarnoff, USAR, Dr. Vannevar Bush, and General of the Army Omar N. Bradley, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Unable to attend the first meeting because of his absence from Washington, General Bradley was represented by his executive, Brig. Gen. Willis Matthews, USA.

The Rockefeller Committee was told by Mr. Wilson that members should feel free to call upon anyone in the Defense Department for information or assistance. Secretary Wilson added that this extends to those persons outside the Defense Department "who in the judgment of the Committee might have information or suggestions of value in their deliberations."

Mr. Hensel Special Advisor

In addition to serving as counsel to the Rockefeller Committee, Mr. Hensel is Consultant and Special Advisor for Legal Affairs to the Secretary of Defense.

THE JOURNAL issue of 14 Feb. predicted the appointment of Mr. Hensel to a Pentagon post, that of General Counsel of the Department of Defense. This position now is filled by Mr. Roger Kent, but there are reports he will leave this assignment within the next few months.

Mr. Hensel will be responsible, Secretary Wilson said, for reviewing the complex legal apparatus of the Defense Department and the three military services, and for recommending improved legal procedures. Although particular attention will be given to simplifying and expediting the legal phases of procurement, the survey will cover all phases of legal services required to be performed. Mr. Hensel has stated that once this survey has been completed he would regard his mission as accomplished.

Mr. Hensel, a graduate of Princeton, has been practicing law since 1925. He served during WW II as Legal Counsel, General Advisor and Assistant Secretary of the Navy under the late James Forrestal.

He suggested and established what became the Office of the General Counsel of the Navy Department. Later, as Assistant Secretary of the Navy in charge of Procurement, he was Secretary Forrestal's aide and representative in applying business principles to the determination of materiel requirements.

Since WW II, Mr. Hensel has performed various special jobs for the Economic Cooperation Administration, the State Department and the Hoover Commission on the Reorganization of the Executive Departments.

Army Boards Slated For Permanent Promotions

Army selection boards will meet at The Pentagon in April to recommend Regular Army officers for permanent promotion to the grade of colonel, and Regular Army Women's Army Corps officers for permanent promotions to the grades of lieutenant colonel, major and captain.

Names of eligible personnel will be submitted by The Adjutant General to the selection boards. No lists or recommendations are required to be submitted.

Any eligible officer, who so desires, may submit a written request for consideration through channels to The Adjutant General, attention of the Department of the Army selection board no later than 10 days after its convening.

Selections will be made by the "best qualified" method except for selection to the grades of captain and major in the WAC, which will be made on a "fully qualified" basis.

Selection Board Dates

Selection boards will convene as follows:

2 April, for the grades of WAC lieutenant colonel, major and captain.

7 April, for the grade of colonel, Army list, Judge Advocate General's Corps and Chaplain Corps.

UP GOES THE POWER OF EVERY BUICK-

Special

Super

and Roadmaster!

World's
newest
V8

Television treat—the BUICK CIRCUS HOUR—every fourth Tuesday

It's more than pride that makes a man want a lot of horsepower beneath the hood of the car he owns.

For the real point in reaching record horsepowers and compression ratios goes beyond miles per hour. It steps up performance and economy in normal driving.

That's what our engineers did when they upped the power and compression of each 1953 Buick—SPECIAL, SUPER and ROADMASTER—to the highest figures in Buick's fifty-year history.

In the SUPER and ROADMASTER, they put a new kind of V8 Engine—first passenger-car V8 with 8.5 to 1 compression, and a long list of other major engineering advances.

For the new SPECIAL, they redesigned the big and able F-263 Fireball 8 Engine—gave it shorter flame travel, faster firing, higher horsepower and compression.

And to these spirited engines they coupled the new Twin-Turbine Dynaflow Drive* that adds flash-fast, quiet getaway to utter smoothness.

Just to give you an example of what all this means: The 1953 Buick SPECIAL with Dynaflow can beat the mighty 1952 ROADMASTER on getaway—can reach 30 mph (when the law allows) with a combined speed and jerk-free smoothness no other car can equal.

Of course, there's far more to these new Buicks for 1953—some seven dozen new features alone.

But why not visit your Buick dealer and see for yourself that these are the greatest Buicks—and the greatest values—in fifty great years?

TTAF Expansion Brings Need For Instructors

Qualified personnel, particularly overseas returnees, are urgently needed to serve as technical or general training instructors in the Technical Training Air Force, TTAF Headquarters has announced.

Maj. Gen. Eugene L. Eubank, TTAF Commanding General, explained that recurring vacancies are created at TTAF's seven technical and three military training bases by regular promotions and discharges.

"We are in the midst of a rapid expansion of our training program to keep pace with new and more demanding Air Force requirements," he said. "To do this successfully, we need mature people with actual field experience and a strong desire to teach others."

Technical fields open to top-calibre instructors include aircraft maintenance, weapons maintenance and armament systems, wire maintenance, communications, radar, photography, transportation, intelligence, administration, automotive maintenance, supply, comptroller and trades and crafts.

Applications should be made out under provisions of Air Force Regulation 39-41, dated 15 January 1952, which outlines the procedures for making application and lists the information required for action upon applications.

Applications should be submitted through channels prescribed by the major air commands direct to the Commanding General, Air Training Command. Airmen in this country or overseas are eligible, but personnel in units scheduled for overseas assignment are not permitted to apply for reassignment. Overseas applicants should note that their requests should not be submitted to the ATC earlier than the 12th month or later than the ninth month prior to their scheduled rotation.

MATS Survey Suggests Changes In Procedures

The report on the survey of the transport operational procedures and capabilities of the Military Air Transport Service has been received from MATS Transport Operations Planning Committee, it was announced this week by Lt. Gen. Joseph Smith, Commander, MATS.

General Smith in expressing his appreciation to Brig. Gen. Henry C. Kristofferson, chairman, and the other seven committee members, described the report as "an objective, impartial analysis of our transport operations which will be of both immediate and long-range value."

The eight-man committee was called together by General Smith on 18 Dec. to conduct a thorough survey of MATS global transport operations in support of the Department of Defense. The committee was composed of Air Force and Navy reserve officers of long experience in the civil air transport field.

Recommendations of the committee included some realignment in route assignments and aircraft scheduling within each of the three operating divisions; closer physical location of transport control centers, meteorological sections and flight-following centers; clarification of some items in the MATS operations manual to avoid possible misinterpretation by air crews; uniformity in organizational structure of Operations, Traffic and Maintenance elements throughout MATS Headquarters and Division Headquarters; more emphasis on the present program of cross-training of pilots as navigators; and continuing action to insure the immediate availability of frequently-used spare parts.

The report is being given thorough and careful review by MATS headquarters and each of its three transport division headquarters.

Members of the committee were:

Brig. Gen. Henry C. Kristofferson, Chairman, pilot-executive, Pan American World Airways; Col. Weldon E. Rhoades, Palo Alto, Calif., pilot and engineer, United Airlines; Col. Charles F. Skannal, Denver, Colo., pilot, United Airlines; Col. Edgar B. Franklin, Arlington, Va., Chief, Flight Operations Division, Civil Aeronautics Administration; Capt. Wharton E. Larned (USNR), Los Angeles, Calif., Chief Pilot, Western Division, United Airlines; Col. Emory Marvin Ellington, Pacific Palisades, Calif., aeronautical engineer, and West Coast manager of Air Transport Association; Col. William T. Arthur, Memphis, Tenn., vice-president operations, Chicago and Southern Airlines; Lt. Col. Joseph A. McKeown, Excelsior, Minn., president, Airline Engineering Pilot Consultants.

Sell USAF Old Equipment

The Air Force announced this week that it will dispose of all its surplus and obsolete equipment following completion of retention levels now being established by 15 Air Materiel Command depots.

Disposal of unnecessary materials, which has been halted since the outbreak of the Korean conflict, will partially relieve the critical need for new warehousing and leased warehousing space. Items which will be disposed of range from hairpins to complete aircraft engines.

"The functions of the security forces in the air, on the land and sea must be carefully calculated so that there be no duplication, there be no additional expense. But it is the concern of each of us to see that none is neglected."—THE HON. DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER.

Safeguarding Survivors. The news that the Department of Defense has under active consideration a concrete over-all plan for more adequate benefits to surviving members of the families of those who die in the Service of their country is most heartening. The present situation is such a jumble of varying laws that few know for certain what will be done for their families if they should lose their lives. Instances are cited wherein the benefits paid to the families of two officers of the same grade and length of service can vary by as much as 600 per cent.

The need for a more realistic system of Survivor benefits was recognized by the last Administration which twice submitted to Congress a proposed pay-as-you-go plan whereby deductions from the pay of officers and enlisted personnel would have set up a fund out of which payments would have been made to their widows and children. This plan, while a recognition of the existing need, had many faults—it would have established a precedence for pay deductions for benefits properly the responsibility of the Government and would have led, in effect, to a substantial reduction in pay. But the point that really held it up in Congress was the fact that it did nothing about the great disparity in benefits resulting from applying the Federal Employees Compensation Act to some personnel and not to others.

The new plan starts out by placing all categories of uniform personnel on the same basis for benefits. The six months' death gratuity would apply to all personnel but would be revised to set a minimum of $1,200 and a maximum of $3,000 instead of the present spread of $468 to $6,857. The core of the proposal would be the establishment of a new benefit to be known as the "Service Compensation" whereby widows of deceased service men would be paid monthly compensations ranging from $100 to $437.18 until she dies or remarries. The present veterans' compensation for widows of regular personnel varies from $60 to $75—a most unrealistic income for survival in these days. To further stabilize the situation for dependents, the proposed system would place all service personnel under Social Security. This would mean that career personnel would be entitled to Social Security benefits the same as their fellow citizens in private life, while personnel on temporary military duty would not lose their Social Security credits while in the Service.

One great weakness of the new proposal is that it apparently makes no provision for the families of those who die after they have passed to the retired list. Of course, over the years after they have built up Social Security credits they would be better off than now, but in the meantime, and for those already retired, there would be no help. This should be corrected.

The most promising feature is that a concrete plan has been put forward and that the Department is working on it. There will be time for suggestions and a determination of the feelings of the Service personnel before it is crystalized for submission to Congress and then there will be hearings by the Committees. Thus it is important that it be studied closely and suggestions for changes made known. In this connection THE JOURNAL will be pleased to receive and publish letters commenting on the new plan. In that way both the Department and the members of Congress can learn the views of those vitally concerned.

Stockpiling Knowledge. In times when efforts are being made to save money there is always a great temptation to reduce the funds allotted to research. That is probably because no immediate product results and, for the current year at least, there is nothing tangible to which the people can point to as having been lost by the cut. What is lost, however, is much greater—it is knowledge and ideas which mean progress in future years and which can not be made up for by subsequent generosity.

Today this is particularly important in aeronautical research, for everything we have in advanced aircraft is the result of research conducted in years past. Yet a dwindling in appropriations is already underway. In 1952, the Air Force was given $62 million for aircraft research and development. In 1953 this dropped to $59

Change PX System?

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I have noted for sometime your praiseworthy efforts in behalf of service personnel in condemning the many encroachments being made by the Congress on such privileges as the Post Exchange, Commissary, Dependent Medical Care, etc. The encroachments on these privileges, as well as the inroads made against Retirement Benefits have, in my 16½ years of service, been considerable. In many instances, I have felt that they were a breach of the contract made between myself and the United States Government as of the time of my original commission. As a result, the coming generation of "Army Brats" are thinking twice before entering the Military Service. They have heard their fathers complain about encroachment after encroachment to the point that many of them have no desire to follow in our footsteps. I have given this a great deal of thought as time has passed, and am behind your efforts 100 per cent.

There is, however, one field in which I feel the Army and Air Force must share responsibility with the Congress in the lessening of privilege. This is in the Post Exchange field. I feel that this is one field that the Army and Air Force must go to work on at once, and I feel very strongly that the Army-Air Force

Post Exchange Service must be abolished, and the control of the Post Exchanges returned to Station and Unit Commanders as it was prior to World War II.

Under the old Post Exchange system, local Exchanges received the backing and support of the local wholesalers from whom they made their purchases. Today, with the sprawling bureaucracy—The Army-Air Force Exchange Service—controlling and centralizing purchases, our old backers are against us. Also, in order to support this bureaucracy, prices have had to be raised, and the profits that used to accrue to the soldier have been cut. To see the difference between our Exchange Service, and a well run one, simply compare an Army or Air Force Exchange with a Navy or Marine Exchange. Even overseas (Korea for example) the soldier and airman pay $1.00 for a carton of cigarettes as opposed to the $0.70 paid by a sailor or marine. Where has the extra thirty cents gone?

I therefore recommend, in order to restore some privileges, as well as to save personnel and money, that the Army-Air Force Post Exchange Service be abolished, and that the management of these Exchanges be returned to the control of the Station and Unit Commanders where they belong.

COLONEL, INFANTRY

million. The 1954 budget cuts this figure less than in half—$28 million.

Meanwhile the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, the backbone of aviation research, is also suffering from lack of funds. Dr. Jerome C. Hunsaker, NACA chairman, has made the statement that there is more urgent need for modernization of facilities and money for research now than at any time since the end of World War II hostilities. Its modest budget of $77,630,000 is now in the hands of the House Appropriations Committee and most likely will be reported out next week.

It would be a most wise safeguard for the future if Congress should provide amply for these research facilities.

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—

Senator Reynolds, Chairman of the Senate Military Committee, states that he will not introduce his proposed bill to create the grade of Field Marshal for the Chief of Staff of the Army. General George C. Marshall, the Senator said, had advised him that he does not want such a rank. Meantime, Secretary of the Navy Knox has asked that the rank of Admiral of the Fleet be created for Admiral Ernest J. King.

50 Years Ago—

The appropriations for the Army are in excess of $78,000,000, while those for the Navy amount to more than $81,000,000. An important change in the organic structure of the Army has been effected by the enactment of a law creating a General Staff. Another enactment of almost equal importance is the measure establishing the Army War College, thus affording a broader and more thorough system of education for military officers. The Navy and the Marine Corps have fared even better than the Army. The appropriation, besides providing for three battleships of 16,000 tons each and two of 13,000 tons each, together with three training ships, authorizes an increase of 100 per cent in the Midshipman Corps at the Naval Academy, an addition of 3,000 to the enlisted force and a large addition to the Marine Corps in officers and men.

85 Years Ago—

"Alas for the schoolmistress. (England). She has been endeavoring to teach the world for a long time that our system of naval defense was all wrong, until, at last, time removes the veil, and she discovered that her boasted broadside iron-clads, on which millions have been spent, are hopelessly vulnerable, and may be riddled by the gun—the 15-inch—which every vessel of the American iron-clad Navy now carries."

Sugar Instead of Lumps

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Noncommissioned officers of all the Services who have been taking rough lumps during the past few years may be getting some breaks at last. From your recent reports, it would seem that Congressmen are paying attention to those at the Pentagon who tell them that it's a tough job holding on to NCO's. We now know we have some people in there pitching for us and that's important for morale.

The ease-up on promotion criteria, return of the 20-year enlistment, etc., are going to make many of us stop and think again before saying goodbye to service.

All of us hope something can be done about housing conditions and that some way will be figured out so a man can figure on more time in the States in between overseas duty. One other thing: why doesn't Congress do something so that many master sergeants who are fortunate enough to make warrant officer don't have to take a loss in pay as a result of a promotion.

Anyhow, things do look a little encouraging and that's sweet news for those who enlisted with the idea to make it a career.

President Shuns Rickover Row

Senate Continues to Hold up Confirmation of 39 Navy Flag Officers; 102 other USN Captains on Way out; Navy Defends System

PRESIDENT Eisenhower has adopted a "hands-off policy" in the case of Capt. Hyman G. Rickover, the Navy's atomic submarine expert whose failure to be promoted to rear admiral is under investigation by the Senate Armed Services Committee.

The President, THE JOURNAL learned this week, has said he cannot take a stand on the controversial matter, because of the many Navy and Congressional efforts which went into the formulation of the present Navy promotion system.

Meanwhile these developments took place:

1—The Senate Committee continued to withhold confirmation of 39 flag officers after hearing witnesses this week, and recessed to meet again "at the call of the Chairman," Senator Leverett Saltonstall.

2—Senator Henry M. Jackson (D-Wash.) told the Committee that the atomic-propulsion program is the Navy's "number one project" and should be headed by a flag officer.

3—Representative Sidney R. Yates (D-Ill.), who put the national spotlight on the case, again discussed it on the floor of the House. He said a Congressional review of the selection system for all ranks "is warranted."

4—Observers noted that the Navy will retire 102 other senior captains on 30 June for having failed twice to be promoted. Included in the group is a Congressional Medal of Honor winner.

5—Rear Adm. Homer N. Wallin, Chief of the Bureau of Ships, assured the Senate Committee that the Navy's atomic power program will go forward "at an undiminished pace," regardless of Captain Rickover's retirement.

"Example of Flagrant Errors"

In suggesting a Congressional review of the selection system, Representative Yates said "it is essential that the Congress face this problem now." He said there is no protection under the law "for officers who are eligible and have not been promoted. Nobody checks the actions of the selection boards. Nobody knows or apparently cares whether the selection boards have acted wisely. The Rickover case is only one example of flagrant errors that must have happened in many other instances."

Representative Yates said "Unless remedial steps are taken, the same procedure will continue on and on." He argued that "There is too much secrecy surrounding the promotion process." He said "There is an appalling lack of information. I think that not only for the benefit of those who make the service their life career, but for the sake of the country as a whole, there must be some check or balance established to verify that the selection boards have done the best job possible." He declared "the judgment of admirals is not infallible merely because they are admirals."

Boards "Not Infallible"

The Navy has said it "realizes that selection boards are not infallible, composed as they are of human beings. But they are formed carefully of the highest caliber officers, who have themselves been subjected to the selection system. The records of the board's deliberations are not retained, for to do so would invite outside pressure and continuous appeals by officers not selected. This would require endless reviews by the board and would hold up promotions."

A Navy spokesman noted that its program of "forced" attrition is set at a high percentage in the rank of captain "in order to provide an orderly flow of promotions to the top." In addition to Captain Rickover, 102 other captains will be retired on 30 June as a result of the "two times and out" law which specifies that an officer must retire after he has failed twice to be promoted.

Hold High Medals

This group includes one officer who has been awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor, 10 who are holders of the Navy Cross, seven who have been awarded the Silver Star, 40 who wear the Legion of Merit, one who has been decorated with the Distinguished Flying Cross, and 22 who hold the Bronze Star Medal. As a result of these decorations, many of the officers will be promoted to rear admiral upon retirement.

Officers in the group to be retired range in age from 50 to 55 (Captain Rickover is 52), and have completed from 30 to 32 years' total commissioned service. One of the group has had less than 13 years' commissioned duty.

During his testimony before the Senate Committee, Admiral Wallin said the Navy has "a number" of officers who are "well qualified" to replace Captain Rickover as head of the AEC's atomic reactor development section. Although according Captain Rickover "great credit" for his part in the development of the atomic submarine, Admiral Wallin said the success of the project was due to "the coordinated efforts of many men."

Responsible For A-Sub

Before the controversy developed, Captain Rickover was decorated by the Secretary of the Navy because "more than any other individual" he was responsible for the rapid development of the A-sub. AEC Chairman Gordon Dean has said if one man "were to be singled out for special notice" in the development of the atomic-submarine "such an honor should go to Capt. H. G. Rickover."

Mr. Yates noted that perhaps Captain Rickover was persona non grata to the admirals because he "is an individualist and the Navy has no use for individualists. The Navy demands organization achievements and not individual achievements." He said in the Captain's case, "The facts show that the success story of the atomic project is one almost entirely of individual achievement—the vision and devotion of a single man."

He added, "We must find some way... of giving recognition to the merit of an outstanding individualist in the face of the Navy's demand for conformity and uniformity. We cannot, we must not continue to indulge in the luxury of wasting men whom we cannot replace."

Forces retirement law passed in 1947 when everything seemed economical and rosy, and when our training films fitted Ferdinand the Bull, join the Army and see the world, tactics, but with the increased pressure being applied against the Reds by our State Department, it seems to me we are on the wrong road in knocking down our best combat leaders at this time. Youth thirsts for leadership, as well as opportunity, in combat."

DRUG ADDICTION by military personnel in the Far East is on the decline, Secretary of Defense Wilson informed Representative Yorty of California this week. Representative Yorty had written to the Secretary concerning reports he had received. The majority of the offenders, Wilson said, had used drugs before their induction into the forces. Vigorous enforcement, he said, is getting results.

Senate Approves Funds Cut

THE Senate has concurred with the action of the House on the 1953 supplemental appropriation bill for the Defense Department. As in the House, no money was authorized for a deficit of $11,000,000 in station allowances for Army personnel. Otherwise, the Senate said that $1,043,724,000, as approved by the House, should be transferred from previously voted funds. Included in the supplemental requests are funds for about 3,000 additional Army officers and for more liberal enlisted promotions.

FORCED RETIREMENTS were hit this week by Representative Sieminski (D-N. J.), who served as an Army major in Korea. He told the House that current retirement policies "are cutting down our best World War II and Korea combat-tested generals and leaders, while the Soviets are not."

Said Mr. Sieminski: "This Armed

Stalin's Death Poses Question For Future

WHILE there is no evidence of overwhelming grief in America over the death suffered by Prime Minister Stalin, there is a great deal of speculation, chiefly fruitless, on the future. For while not even a Russian chief of state departs from the wish of the Soviet hierarchy, he is of necessity a strong willed man whose influence on his lesser colleagues is very great indeed, and whose firm desire is likely to amass a quick majority, if not a unanimous, support for the premier's wish. This certainly will be true at the outset, whether of Molotov whom the western diplomats know well, or of Malenkov who, on the contrary, has remained as immersed within Soviet Russia as was Stalin himself; presumably this has been to avoid exposing Malenkov to accidental temptations — even though Molotov and Vishinsky and Gromyko, while often exposed, have faithfully avoided contracting such corrupting occidental vices as restraint, courtesy and ordinary truthfulness.

IT IS WORTH REMEMBERING that Stalin's early days in office were dedicated first to undermining old rivals, whom he ultimately scalped. That is standing operating procedure in tyrannies. Although Trotsky was not finally disposed of, by assassination, until fifteen years later, he had long before that been stripped of power and exiled. The leading unsuccessful candidate for the succession to Stalin might do well to check up on his own insurance policies and on possible travel-routings. And so would others who remember how many old-style comrades of the past it is necessary to liquidate before a new-style dictator can relax and sleep soundly.

IT IS TOO EARLY to conjecture on the Kremlin's future foreign policy. Stalin was wise enough to know the limitations of his country's resources, and after V-E Day to stay out of dangerous commitments. In Korea since mid-1950 he certainly has lost more equipment than he counted on losing but, there as elsewhere, it is his allies who have taken the principal losses while assuring Moscow the principal gains. Will Stalin's successor exploit a half-warm war so shrewdly? And stop there? If not, there is a good deal for western chancelleries and defense establishments to think about.

THE PRESENT VISIT TO AMERICA by Foreign Secretary Eden and Chancellor of the Exchequer Butler was decided upon last December, long before the bell began its preliminary tolling for Josef Stalin, but the Britons' visit is related to Communist policy past, present, and future. For Britain's need of "trade not aid," as it is described somewhat liberally, of course springs from necessities intimately affected by defense requirements.

Yardley in The Baltimore Sun
"BRINGING ALONG A SICK FRIEND"

The British triple aim is (1) to pave the way for putting sterling on a readily convertible basis as a means of stimulating trade; (2) to plan the stabilizing of the price of commodities which the United States buys in large quantities; and (3) to encourage the investment of more dollars in Commonwealth industry. No immediate attainment of any of these objectives is sought, and the visitors have stressed the fact that theirs is an exploratory tour only. The fact, as well known in our own Treasury establishment, is that the Commonwealth patient is ill, but nobody is quite sure which is the right medicine. The further fact is that France, whose nervousness just now is acute, has expressed worry over an Anglo-American "agreement" that would cause worry to French trade but assurances have gone to Paris that no agreement would be made without prior consultations with France. A large purpose of the weekend conversations is to exchange information and permit development of a more tangible English plan, which can be discussed in detail and at some length with the Commonwealth premiers at their London meeting next June.

THE FLOW OF EAST GERMANS into the haven of West Berlin has quickened its already rapid pace, so that at the weekend some 2,500 refugees were creeping through or under the Iron Curtain into the overcrowded camps which Mayor Reuter is trying to clear. The commercial airlines, using 2-motor planes and offering bargain rates of $8.33 a flight, are able to extricate only about 600 a day, so that some 45,000 of all ages and classes are still stranded in West Berlin. The request has gone out for larger commercial planes, but there is reluctance to pay the $15.47 cost, modest as this seems to our eyes, and American authorities are now considering the propriety of using a few large-capacity troop transports until the waiting list is greatly reduced. The problem of ultimate placement of the refugees is still unsolved, but western Canada is thinking of opening farmland to several thousand properly screened.

With aggressive confidence that all terms of the peace contract soon will be formally accepted by the western powers, West Germany has proceeded methodically with its planning for a military establishment. Besides the projected army, the new air force is taking well defined form—on paper. A midweek news dispatch from Bonn offers an estimate of 1,326 planes and 80,000 men, the force to include ten units (73 planes each) of fighter-bombers for ground support and four of jet fighters (75 planes each), plus two of all-weather fighters (36 planes each). SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Regular Army Resignations—Following last week's announcement that certain Army Reserve officers on active duty are eligible for accelerated separation, speculation heightened this week that a policy soon will be announced to permit some Regular officers to resign.

Unofficial reports are that the Army will permit such resignations beginning next month, although no formal announcement on this subject has been made as yet.

When resignations of Regular officers are permitted, it is seen as a certainty that each case will be reviewed on its individual merits and that no blanket-type action will be authorized.

Army officials are striving to make the Officer Corps as voluntary an organization as possible consistent with military requirements. Hence, the authorization for the stepped up separation of certain Reservists. It follows that a similar policy will be announced for Regular officers in order to insure equitable treatment for all components.

Ft. Belvoir Reserve Col. Wins $15,000—The Chief of the Technical Service Department at the Engineer Research and Development Laboratories, Ft. Belvoir, Va., Mr. George W. Howard, Colonel, USAR, has won a $15,000 Rockefeller Public Service Award.

The award will enable Mr. Howard to spend a year visiting government and private research and development agencies in the U.S. and overseas to study methods of direction, planning and management.

Mr. Howard is a colonel in the Engineers Reserve and commands the Mobilization Designation Detachment at the Ft. Belvoir Laboratories.

AF R.O.T.C. Cadet Wins $18,000—Alan M. Herscovitz, 19, has been declared winner of the fifth annual Disabled American veterans shadow-gram word puzzle contest and was presented with an $18,000 first prize money check at Patriotic Hall, Los Angeles, Calif., by Floyd L. Ming, National Commander of D.A.V. A junior on the Los Angeles campus of the University of California, Mr. Herscovitz is a member of the Air Force R.O.T.C. program, and expects to enter the Air Force as a second lieutenant on graduation next year.

Radiology Honor to Army MSC Officer—The American College of Radiology has conferred the degree of Associate Fellowship on Lt. Col. Maxwell Dauer, MSC, chief of the Special Projects Branch of the Medical Research and Development Board of the Office of the Army Surgeon General. He is the first non-medical Army officer thus honored. In 1949 he was the first non-medical Army officer certified as a Radiation Physicist by the American Board of Radiology.

Colonel Dauer has been on duty with the Army School of Roentgenology, the Manhattan Project, and the Atomic Energy Commission. He participated in the atomic experiments at both Bikini and Eniwetok.

Navy Papers Criticized—Secretary of the Navy Robert B. Anderson has warned Navy CO's to take greater care in clearing the material that goes into Navy newspapers, watching especially for anything that may be indecent or pornographic.

Some Navy newspapers, the Secretary says, "are not receiving proper supervision" with respect to material they publish, and "many" of them include "entire columns of material which could under no circumstances be considered of legitimate special interest to Naval personnel."

He said "several" contain "articles, cartoons, jokes and other features verging upon the pornographic."

Mr. Anderson has directed CO's of all Navy ships and stations to take "immediate action" to see that such papers reflect greater credit upon the Naval service.

He said his order isn't intended to curtail "legitimate humor" or to make the general tone of the paper "colorless," but "prime attention should be concentrated always upon the mission of the paper and its utilization to the best interests of the personnel it serves."

The Navy Secretary said "inadequate" supervision results in publications which merely transmit "trite and pointless, or even indecent matter, with resultant discredit to the Navy."

Canadian Notes—In lieu of one of the three normal 16-day leave periods which men of the 27th Canadian Infantry Brigade serving in Germany are now entitled to annually, eight 48-hour leaves a year.

Comdr. Robert P. Welland, DSC and Bar, CD, RCN, 34, will command the Royal Canadian Navy contingent taking part in the Coronation in London next June. Marching in the procession will be 78 officers, men and women of the RCN and RCN(R), while 43 other members of the same units will join with other Canadian armed forces in lining the procession route.

The first group of Portuguese air force crewmen who will be trained by the Royal Canadian Air Force are scheduled to arrive in Canada next month. Portugal will be the eighth nation represented in Canada under the aircrew training aid extending to member nations of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Conscientious Objector Wins Medals—A 23-year-old Navy hospital corpsman who is a conscientious objector to bearing firearms in defense of his country has won five high military decorations in Korea.

Navy Hospital Corpsman Third Class Alvin L. Joyner, is a Seventh Day Adventist who entered the medical service in order that he might not have to bear arms. He has served with the First Marine Division in Korea since last June, and in the first two months of combat earned three Purple Hearts, the Bronze Star Medal and the Silver Star.

Accompanying a 13-man patrol into blazing action on Bunker Hill last July, Joyner was wounded along with 10 other members of the group. He treated them all, and won the nation's third highest award.

In August, he was wounded on the 17th and the 27th, and on the 30th won the Bronze Star Medal for attending Marine casualties under an enemy mortar barrage after he was wounded again.

Joyner is now an X-ray technician with Able Company, First Medical Battalion, First Marine Division. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence A. Joyner of Route 3, Madison, Wisc.

...Defense Department strategy now calls for a RELAXED EFFORT to obtain immediate repeal of the Van Zandt career officer retirement rider, and a STRONG PRESENTATION instead to prevent its inclusion in the 1954 appropriations act. Legislative experts feel that by the time repeal could be obtained, the FISCAL YEAR would almost be at end anyway.

SAVED—13,017,781 Military Man Hours!

In 1952 the Scheduled Certificated Airlines, in regular service and charter flights, carried 682,605 passengers on official military transportation requests. This total is made up of actual counts plus some estimates based on average trip lengths.

Compared with the speeds of the fastest surface transportation, the result in terms of military man hours saved is 13,017,781!

This conservative estimate of over 13 million man hours saved in one year is an excellent indication that it's good business for the Armed Forces to move more personnel — individuals and large groups — via the Scheduled Certificated Airlines.

USMC Education

the training conducted is practical and effective.

The Educational Center is organized almost entirely for the task of instruction and training. Nearly all non-academic administrative and housekeeping needs are met by the parent headquarters, the Marine Corps Schools.

Staff agencies in the Educational Center Headquarters include the necessary faculty sections for instruction in specialized subjects; a Coordination and Evaluation Section for the coordination, evaluation and review of doctrine, policies, curricula, teaching methods, including training aids; the Secretary's Section for academic administration; an Instructor Training Section to train instructors in the art and techniques of instruction; and such academic service agencies as the James Carson Breckinridge Library of amphibious and other military and professional reference works, the Training Aids Section, and the Reproduction Section.

A major addition in 1952 to the facilities of the Educational Center was Ellis Hall, an amphibious assault trainer. This unique amphitheatre-type building has special lighting and other equipment which greatly facilitates the visual portrayal of amphibious instruction and effectively increases the value of the instruction presented.

The faculty members of the Center and of the various schools are mostly Marine and Navy officers with a few officers of other services. Guest lectures by distinguished civilians and military personnel are frequent and stimulate student interest in political and technological developments, in current affairs, and in various military aspects of their profession.

The Schools and Courses

The Basic School is the foundation of the officer education program of the Marine Corps. It combines preparatory and basic courses for all Marine officer candidates and newly commissioned officers, both men and women. The preparatory courses are designed to bring all officer candidates—from the enlisted ranks, from civilian colleges, and from Naval Reserve Officer Training courses—to a common military proficiency as they are commissioned. The Basic Course is presently a five months' program of intensive military training intended to prepare all new second lieutenants for duty as infantry platoon leaders in Fleet Marine Force units, the amphibious forces of the Marine Corps. Many graduates soon see action in Korea. Separate, equivalent courses are conducted for Women Marines.

The Junior School conducts an annual intermediate course for captains and majors, including a number of officers of other services and of other nations. The purpose of this school is to prepare the officers at this important stage of their career for command and staff assignments in the infantry regiment or air group, and in the Marine division or air wing. Emphasis is placed on the coordinate employment of air, naval and ground elements in amphibious operations.

The Senior School conducts the annual course for senior field officers, usually in the rank of lieutenant colonel and colonel. Classes usually include officers of the Army, Navy, Air Force, and Coast Guard, and from other nations. Although the students possess diverse experience and specialties, all are capable of moving rapidly to complex problems. Part of their work is done in small staff and committee groups, dealing with realistic requirements of planning and operations. Here again major emphasis is placed on amphibious operations.

Specialist Schools

Other schools and courses provide technical instruction to meet Marine Corps requirements for officer specialists:

The Ordnance School prepares officers for supervisory duties in weapons repair and ammunition, and as staff officers on ordnance matters. Enlisted students are also trained as ordnance technicians.

The Communication Officers School provides signal communication training for junior officers, preparing them for duty as communication officers in Fleet Marine Force units. Amphibious communication operational requirements are covered in detail.

The Naval Gunfire Officer School conducts a three-months' course annually to train Marine Corps officers and a few Army and Navy officers, all usually of field rank, as staff naval gunfire officers.

The Extension School has the mission of preparing and administering correspondence courses which parallel most of the resident courses offered in the Educational Center. Current enrollment is about 7,000, many of the students being non-commissioned officers preparing themselves for advancement to higher rank.

Altogether, the schools and courses of the Educational Center provide a balanced program designed to assure the progressive military schooling of Marine Corps Officers.

The final effectiveness of the program is measured not so much in terms of grades and graduates, but in the professional competence of Marine Corps leadership in all ranks.

ONLY THE RAILROADS can handle the job!

Reference is made to the movement to the National Guard.

May I take this opportunity to congratulate the railroads who participated in this movement for a job well done. Due to the nature of this movement, many difficulties not normally associated with a regular troop movement were experienced; however, through the cooperation of the rail carriers, the entire movement was highly successful. The Commanding General of the Division, as well as other personnel of that Division, have praised the railroads for the method in which this movement was achieved.

The movement of the Division is another example of a successful operation to which the rail carriers and the military service can point with pride.

Sincerely,
Transportation Officer

• This actual letter shows how the railroads handled one major assignment. Just one of the thousands of movements handled with equal dispatch and satisfaction for the Armed Services each year.

No wonder the railroads—above all other transportation systems—are first with the services!

Ft. McNair Sets Up Program of Child Guidance Instruction for Parents

Child guidance instruction and films on the development of infants through adolescence are fields of study not usually associated with military establishments.

Not so with Ft. McNair, Va., where, with the blessings and full cooperation of Col. Harry R. Jackson, commanding officer, a series of informal discussion periods presided over by a child psychiatrist and illustrated with pertinent motion pictures were recently conducted.

The idea for the conferences was advanced by a group of parents at Ft. McNair who felt it would be a great aid and stimulus to other parents if they could have the advantage of skilled guidance and advice in dealing with the multiple complexities of raising children.

It was decided from the outset that movies would be the most attractive and effective device around which to build the conferences. A list of some 400 available films was obtained from the Federal Health Service division of the Federal Security Agency, and a careful selection of those used in the program was made by a committee of physicians on the base.

Maj. Thomas T. Glascock, MC, a specialist in pediatrics and child psychology, volunteered to moderate the question-and-answer discussion after the projection of each film. Parents, that way, had the opportunity of consulting an expert about pertinent problems relative to their own children.

The programs were held weekly in the Post theater, and all Post personnel, military and civilian alike, were invited to attend. Length of films were limited to 30 to 45 minutes to allow adequate time for discussion afterwards.

The first films covered general principles, traits and habits of children of all ages. Later, problems dealing with infants and younger children were discussed in other films, and the last series of motion pictures dealt entirely with teen-agers.

Obituary

Father Valentin H. Franckx

The Reverend Father Valentin H. Franckx, dean of the Roman Catholic clergy in Hawaii, died at St. Francis Hospital, Honolulu, Oahu, on 20 Feb.

Father Franckx, oldest Catholic priest in age, residence and service in the Islands, was born in Ruysbroeck, Belgium, in 1863. He arrived in Honolulu in 1889, when he became priest at the Catholic Cathedral of Our Lady of Peace. Under his direction, the Church of St. Augustine-by-the-Sea at Wai-iki was built.

In addition to his religious work, Father Franckx was very active in the civic life of Honolulu. He had many years of service as chaplain of the Hawaiian National Guard, and was a chaplain with the Army during World War I.

promotions to this rank. This is not the case for promotions to lieutenant colonel and colonel, where recommended lists are still available.

The forthcoming selections mark the first consideration of officers for advancement since April 1951, under provisions of Circular 22, 28 Mar. 1951.

A cutback in Army officer strength and the threatened imposition of the Davis Amendment forced a slowdown in Army promotion plans.

Army officials have told the Armed Services Committees during Davis Amendment hearings that hundreds of promotions have been held up during the past year, mainly in junior officer grades.

Promotions to Lt. Col. and Col.

The Army probably will promote about the same number of majors and lieutenant colonels to higher grades this month as in February.

It is expected that shortly after the middle of March, about 50 promotions from the current eligibility list will be made to colonel and about 145 to lieutenant colonel.

Text of Circular

Following is the text of the new Circular:

I—ZONES OF CONSIDERATION FOR TEMPORARY PROMOTION OF COMMISSIONED OFFICERS ON ACTIVE DUTY TO GRADES OF CAPTAIN AND MAJOR.—1. Selection boards will be convened at the Department of the Army in March 1953 to consider officers for temporary promotion to the grades of captain and major.

a. Primary zones of consideration are as follows:

(1) To captain.—Officers of promotion lists, except those of JAGC, MC, DC, and VC, serving on active duty on 31 December 1952 in the grade of first lieutenant who completed a minimum of 3 years' active service in such grade prior to that date.

(2) To major.—Officers of the following promotion lists serving on active duty on 31 December 1952 in the grade of captain who completed minimum active service in such grade prior to that date as indicated below:

Army	5 years
JAGC	4 years
Chaplains	7 years
WAC	5 years
WMSC	5 years

b. In order that recognition may be given by the Department of the Army to those first lieutenants and captains possessing outstanding ability, major commanders are authorized to recommend the promotion of such officers who are not within the above prescribed zones but who completed a minimum of 1 year on active duty in present grade on current tour prior to 31 December 1952. Recommendations will be prepared on DA Form 78 (Recommendation for Promotion of Officer) and duplicate copies will be forwarded through channels to The Adjutant General, Department of the Army, Washington 25, D. C., ATTN: AGPO-P, to reach that office not later than 25 April 1953. Only recommendations that are approved by commanders reporting direct to the Department

Defense Dept. Survivor Benefits Study Details

declined Regular appointments because of their concern for loss in benefits to survivors.

The joint Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps committee which has been working on the entire problem of Survivor Benefits is headed by a Naval Reserve officer, Capt. J. B. Hoyt, USNR. Its actions and recommendations have been referred to representatives of the Coast Guard, Public Health Service and Coast and Geodetic Survey, who have given concurrence.

Recommendations of the Committee have been submitted to the office of Assistant Secretary of Defense John A. Hannah, who will transmit his own recommendation—for or against—to Secretary Charles E. Wilson. Action must be taken quickly at the Pentagon if legislation is to reach Capitol Hill, after Bureau of the Budget consideration, in time for hearings during the current session. Here are the salient proposals made by Captain Hoyt's group:

Six Months' Gratuity

1. The six months' lump sum death gratuity now paid to survivors should be continued, but with new minimum and maximum amounts. At the present time, the widow of a recruit receives $468 and the widow of a general with 30 years' service on flight pay receives $6,857. Says the Committee: "Considering the purpose of this benefit, the lower payment looks too low on one hand and on the other payments at the upper end of the scale might stand some adjustment downward." The Committee says the idea would be "not to add or subtract from the total money value of the benefits of the survivor concerned, but to adjust between the lump sum benefit and the monthly benefits which would follow the initial lump sum payment."

Monthly Benefits

2. A new concept of Service Compensation should be established. This would provide the unmarried widow, child or children or dependent parents of active duty personnel a monthly benefit equal to 80 per cent of the first $100 of basic pay the principal was receiving at the time of death, plus 40 per cent of the balance. For this purpose, no member of the Armed Forces would be considered to be receiving less than $150 per month. In the event there is only surviving child or one dependent parent and no widow, the compensation would be reduced by 40 per cent. Apparently none of these benefits would apply to survivors of retired personnel.

The Committee recommends that the Service Compensation replace VA Compensation and Soldiers' Indemnity in new cases.

Eliminate FECA Benefits

3. As part of the objective of a common survivor benefits plan for military personnel without regard to component, the recommendation is made that FECA payments should be discontinued in new cases. This is to certain to be one of the most controversial items in the report.

Social Security For All

4. All members of the Armed Forces drawing basic pay should be put into Social Security on a full membership scale. This would mean at a 1½ per cent rate, deduction of $3.15 from the pay of a recruit and $4.50 for the top two enlisted grades and all warrant officer and commissioned officer grades. The report states that such action "would not only provide a survivor benefit commensurate with the size of the existing family, but also maintain full Social Security coverage for the non-professional member. This membership in Social Security," it is added, "would replace the partial arrangement now provided until 1 Jan. 1954."

Out Administering Agencies

5. There are too many agencies and too many determinations involved in current survivor benefits, the report relates. Recommendation is made that these be cut to two or three. The Social Security Agency would be one. Survivor benefit and lump sum gratuity could be determined and paid by the Services or the Veterans Administration, or by having the Service handle the lump sum gratuity and the VA, the survivors annuity.

In elaborating its plan for the new benefit known as Service Compensation, the Committee emphasizes that this would be the "backbone" of the new program. It will be a constant amount for the widow until she dies or remarries.

"A percentage of basic pay used in computing the amounts payable under this benefit," says the report, "restores to a degree the principle of a relationship between the pay status of the principal and the benefit for his survivors."

Under this plan, a widow of a member of the Armed Forces would receive from $100 a month (recruit) to $437.18 for a general officer.

The report explains:

New Plan Explained

"The real value of this Service Compensation is in its constancy for the widow uninterrupted except by death or remarriage. The establishment of this Service Compensation is predicated on the elimination, in new cases, of the free Soldier Indemnity (the $10,000 payment in monthly installments of $92.90 for 10 years) and the Veterans Administration compensation now provided for the widow, minor children and dependent parents.

"In the process of eliminating the free Soldiers' Indemnity," continues the report, "some insurance adjustments will be required. In this connection, the proposal is that holders of National Service Life Insurance or U. S. Government Life Insurance policies who have applied and are in receipt of a waiver of premiums or who have surrendered their policies may reinstate such policies within 120 days of the effective date of the provision by payment of the proper premium and other reinstatement charges."

Squaring away with the problem of eliminating the FECA benefits, the Committee says that, "there is no justification for the present situation where two Service members of different components, but of the same active duty pay grade, could be killed in the same accident and the widow of the Reservist, except in case of an E-1-2-3, would receive a greater benefit than the widow of the Regular."

Social Security Plan

The report contains an explanatory section on the all-inclusive Social Security proposal, as follows:

"Certain benefits are now provided by the partial membership type of Social Security the Services now have. This is provided by emergency legislation which will expire 1 Jan. 1954 and possibly may not be extended.

"The continuance of Social Security benefits and their full realization, it is believed, will require full membership by the Service member.

"Social Security is made a part of the proposed plan as a logical method of providing the increased benefits which are considered desirable for a family with minor children.

"Full membership would involve the payment of present Social Security laws to provide for participation (including deductions from pay) by the active duty Service member based on graded wage credits ranging from $210 per month for E-1 to $300 per month for the E-6 and all higher pay grades.

"There are two reasons for choosing $210 as the wage credit for the E-1: first, the present pay (basic pay plus allowances for an E-1 with more than two dependents is $210.90; second, the maximum family benefit now payable under Social Security is $168.75 or 80 per cent of the average wage, whichever is less.

"Thus a wage credit of $210 a month would permit a surviving widow with three children to receive $168 or approximately the maximum benefit. Present basic pay plus allowances for all pay grades E-6 and higher are over $300 per month—the maximum wage credit upon which benefits are based.

"An amendment which would waive for the serviceman the six quarters of coverage (18 months) required under the present law would be required to cover the cases of young servicemen who need protection from loss by entrance into the Service.

"It might be noted here," the committee says, "that full membership in Social Security would go with the Service member as he leaves the Service or retires."

The Committee's report, which includes a draft of a proposal bill (the suggested measure concludes with a section stating that nothing in the Act would deprive any person of any benefit "to which he was entitled before enactment . . .") estimates that the proposed law would cost $141,011,000 per year, compared with an estimated $207,911,000 under present legislation—or a saving of $66,900,000.

In the past, the Defense Department has not been able to come up with a survivor benefit plan which it felt should be energetically advocated on Capitol Hill.

Assistant Secretary Hannah and his associates may think that the Committee's report, with possible modifications, should be submitted as legislation. If not, other steps will be taken.

It has been obvious for the past several years that something must be done. There is unanimous agreement that remedial action is essential—among the Services, in the Department of Defense, at the Bureau of the Budget and on Capitol Hill.

naissance units (54 planes each) and two transport units (48 planes each) also are contemplated.

Meantime, official efforts in France for assuring ratification of the European Army treaty are being pressed by Rene Mayer, the new premier, in plain disregard of General deGaulle, whose party remains the principal opponent of the European Defense Community. The ultimate vote on the treaty may be determined by the number of Gaullists who stick to deGaulle and the number who switch to the government on this issue. M. Mayer has given his countrymen some extremely plain warning that France may find herself isolated if the Chamber fails to support an arrangement so important as the EDC. General de Gaulle has the Communists on his side, but the Reds—while still nominally the largest single party in France—have unmistakably lost a great deal of ground, as well as of members. Their afternoon Paris paper Ce Soir went out of business this week, and L'Humanite has lost two thirds of its 1946 circulation; the Communist-dominated Federation of Labor admits losing well over a third of its members, and probably has lost nearer two thirds; thanks to Government reforms this organization has also been stripped of its power to call general strikes. The party vote in the Assembly remains solid, but it is less alarming, although still a menace when, as on the EDC issue, it stands beside the extreme Rightists.

THE DUST OF IRAN'S week-end disorder has not yet settled enough to show any long-term result. Premier Mossadegh who hastily decamped from his palace and found night refuge in the nearby American Point 4 headquarters, regained his clothing next day and his full dignity shortly afterward. Thereupon the demonstration for the young Shah died almost as suddenly as it had started, and the result of this unsuccessful revolt may well be to increase Mossadegh's authority at the Shah's further expense. The illegal Communist Tudeh party appears to have tried to exploit the disorder, but to have had less to do with starting it than did the religious nationalist, Kashani. Attempts to increase latent anti-American feeling attained little headway, and accomplished nothing more than a few stone-throwing incidents.

Ramon Magsaysay, who has had a most successful and constructive administration of the Philippines Defense Department—specially marked by excellent progress against the Huks—has resigned, following disagreement with President Quirino, and promptly announced his own prospective candidacy for the presidency. He is denied support by the President's party, and starts his campaign

Succeeds Gen. Van Deusen

Election of George F. Maedel as President of RCA Institutes, Inc., was announced this week by Brig. Gen. David Sarnoff, Chairman of the Board of Radio Corporation of America.

Mr. Maedel, Vice-President and General Superintendent of RCA's technical school since 1948, succeeds Maj. Gen. George L. Van Deusen, (USA-Ret.), who retired on 1 March. General Van Deusen, Commandant of the Eastern Signal Corps Training Center during World War II, served as head of the Institutes since October, 1947.

Navy 'Copter Tested

The Navy's first helicopter designed for anti-submarine warfare, the tandem rotor Bell XHSL-1, left the ground at Ft. Worth, Tex., this week in its initial hovering tests. Navy and Bell Aircraft Corp. officials declared the operation entirely satisfactory.

Flight tests will follow after the hovering performance tests are completed. Floyd Carlson, test pilot for Bell, was at the controls for the initial hovering flight.

The new craft is approximately twice as heavy as helicopters now used by the Navy. A high rotor tip speed makes it possible for the plane to reach a high air speed. Blades can be folded to reduce overall length and facilitate storage.

Military Product Survey

John K. Northrop, internationally recognized aeronautical engineer and designer, has been retained on a part time basis as a consultant to the president of The Garrett Corporation, Los Angeles, J. C. Garrett has announced.

"Mr. Northrop, who retired from the presidency of Northrop Aircraft, Inc., last November, under doctor's orders, is undertaking a military product survey for AirResearch Manufacturing Company," Mr. Garrett said. "His work will be directed toward a determination of military accessory requirements several years hence."

Build Crash Boats

The Navy has awarded three contracts, totalling approximately $5,000,000 for construction of 102 sixty-three foot aircraft rescue boats. The contracts do not include the cost of centrally procured materials which is estimated as $15,000 per vessel.

Largest contract, for 60 boats, went to the Stonington Deer-Island Yacht Basin, Stonington, Maine; Sagstad Shipyards, Seattle, Wash., will construct 23 craft, and the remaining 19 boats will be built by the Detroit Basin, Inc., Detroit, Mich. All of the contractors are in the "small businesses" category.

Agent for centrally procured materials will be the Kettenburg Boat Works, San Diego, Calif., which now is building two similar craft.

Only one of the vessels, popularly known as "crash boats," is destined for Navy use. The remaining 101 are being procured for the Air Force. The boats are designed for use in the rescue of personnel from aircraft which have landed in the water.

New AF Trainer Orders

The Beech designed T-34A primary training plane has been ordered into quantity production in the United States and Canada for the U. S. Air Force.

Letter contracts have been issued by the Air Force to Beech Aircraft Corporation, Wichita, Kan., and to a Canadian licensee, the Canadian Car and Foundry Company, Fort William, Ontario. The number of aircraft to be built under each contract was not announced.

The new T-34 ultimately will replace the T-6 "Texan" which, since the end of World War II, has been used as an interim primary trainer in lieu of a more suitable aircraft.

Powered by a 225 hp Continental engine with a constant speed propeller, the T-34 has a top speed of 180 mph, a service ceiling of 20,000 feet, and a range of 785 miles.

The two-place trainer is equipped with fully-retractable tricycle landing gear having a steerable nose wheel. Gross take-off weight is approximately 2,900 pounds, wingspan is 32 feet 10 inches, and length is 25 feet, 11 inches.

The USAF T-34A is a military development of the Beech Model 45 "Mentor." It has no acrobatic restrictions. Its defrosting, defogging, heating and ventilating equipment, and instrumentation make it suitable for training missions under a wide variety of flight conditions.

Former Navy Pilot Joins Firm

Frederic W. Mellor, jr., WWII Navy pilot and former captain and route check pilot with the Scandinavian Airlines System, has joined the sales division of the Goodyear Aircraft Corporation as a staff representative. It is announced by H. Webster Crum, sales manager.

Mr. Mellor is charged with the coordination of the company's sales promotion and advertising programs.

He served five years with the U. S. Navy. After receiving pilot wings at Pensacola Naval Air Station in 1943, he spent the next year at the Florida installation as a flight instructor for multi-engine aircraft. From 1944 until his separation from the service in 1946, Mellor served as a plane commander in the Naval Air Transport Service, flying Pacific and Atlantic routes.

"Milly" Busy Boxcar

A Fairchild Flying Boxcar has set a Far East Theater record, and what may be a world record for C-119's, by logging 2,000 flying hours, it was reported this week.

The combat-seasoned troop and cargo transport, nicknamed "Milly" by her crew, set the record late in February while assigned to the Far Eastern Air Forces "Green Hornet" Squadron based in Japan.

While the C-119's two thousandth hour of flight was logged during a training formation, most of the hours were chalked up during Korean airlift missions.

The ship, which came off Fairchild assembly lines in May 1950, arrived in the Far East in August 1950, soon after Korean operations started, and participated in all the major airdrops of the conflict. These included the history-making drop of paratroopers, artillery and vehicles at Suncheon-Sukchon in October 1950, an operation which broke the back of North Korean resistance, and the March 1951 airborne assault behind battle lines.

During the war Mr. Hendrickson served in the Army where he was awarded the Bronze Star for meritorious action on the Anzio beachhead. Mr. Hendrickson is married and resides at 180 Magnolia Avenue, Cresskill, N. J.

Food Service School

Graduation ceremonies were held 27 Feb. for 51 students completing courses at the Third Army Food Service School at Fort Benning, Ga.

Honor graduate of mess management class No. 8 was SFC Henry E. Williamson of the 47th Infantry Division, Camp Rucker, Ala.

SFC Garland L. Shelton of the 543d Quartermaster Bakery Company, Fort Bragg, N. C., was honor graduate of baking course No. 6.

Honor graduate of cooking class No. 17 was PFC Herman Hobbs of Company C, 508th Airborne Regimental Combat Team, Fort Benning.

New Air ECI Courses

Two courses in electronics, one for officers and one for airmen, have recently become available to those who enroll with the USAF Extension Course Institute, Gunter Air Force Base, Ala.

The first volume of Course 3021, Airman Electronics Fundamentals, has been released, and nine other volumes of this course are in the process of preparation. Course 504, Electronics Officer, two volumes of which are available, will run 16 volumes when completed.

Both courses are being prepared for correspondence study by the Air Training Command.

Sleeve Shift

The Army has ordered that overseas service bars for WWII and Korean service be worn on the right sleeve instead of the left sleeve. The change must be made before 30 June.

Circular 10 states: "Overseas service bars (World War II and Korean Service) will be worn centered on the outside half of the right sleeve with the lower edge of the bar 4 inches above and parallel to the end of the sleeve of the service coat, jacket, or shirt when worn as an outer garment. When worn with World War I wound chevrons, the service bars will be worn immediately above the uppermost chevron. If worn with the Meritorious Unit Commendation, service bars will be worn centered 1 inch above."

with that considerable handicap. Nevertheless his achievements in the defense department have won him so much popular acclaim as to make him considerably larger than his own party and it is quite likely that this relatively young politician will do well in the campaign.

As though this country did not have enough worries over Far East matters, Burma (not unreasonably) is initiating inquiries about the Chinese guerrilla forces in North Burma, and threatening to bring before the United Nations the question of whether to discipline Chiang Kai-shek for his unwillingness or inability to control those distant forces (some 10,000 men) in their activities threatening the Burma peace. Of more immediate consequence perhaps is the Burmese military decision to undertake with available Gurkhas some mopping up of the wandering Chinese forces southeast of Myitkyina. This campaign is under way, and could be effective.

The French command in south Indo-China has undertaken a long-term campaign to clear the Saigon river, in the 35 miles downstream from Saigon itself. This is a slow business, for there is a great deal of swamp and jungle which the Reds have mined, but it is a necessary campaign if the full productivity of that rich delta country is to be achieved.

U. S. Coast Guard

BOATSWAIN mate first class Bernard C. Webber, USCG, has been chosen the Coast Guard's "Hero of the Year" for his part in rescuing survivors of the tanker SS Pendleton which broke in two and sank off the coast of Cape Cod in February, 1952.

In ceremonies 21 March in Baltimore, Md., Mr. Webber will be presented the Gold Medal of Valor, which is awarded annually by American Legion Post No. 27 to the outstanding Coast Guardsman of the year.

During ceremonies last summer in the Treasury Department, Washington, D. C., Webber received the Gold Life-Saving Medal for "extreme and heroic daring," as officer-in-charge of the motor lifeboat which rescued 32 men from death minutes before the stern section of the Pendleton capsized.

Coos Bay In Rescue

At 10:34 A.M. (EST) on 27 Feb., the Coast Guard Cutter COOS BAY rescued the entire crew of 10 from the Navy patrol plane which was forced to ditch in the Atlantic. The COOS BAY, an ocean station vessel, was on patrol at Ocean Station ECHO. This station is about half way between Bermuda and the Azores.

The rescue prompted Secretary of Treasury George M. Humphrey to send the following to Vice Admiral Merlin O'Neill, Commandant of the Coast Guard:

"Please pass to the skipper, officers and crew of the Coast Guard Cutter COOS BAY my sincere congratulations for a job well done. Rescue of the Navy plane's crew was in the best traditions of the Coast Guard as Americans have come to know it. We are proud of you."

Procurement Agency Comptroller

Establishment of a Comptroller's office at the New York Quartermaster Procurement Agency is announced by Col. F. G. Thompson, QMC, Commanding.
Lt. Col. Gerald S. Nash, formerly Fiscal Officer for the Agency, has been designated Comptroller, and Meyer Rotker, formerly Chief, Management Engineering Division, has been designated Deputy Comptroller. The new office was established in conformance with the Department of the Army's policy to apply a Comptroller concept to all field establishments in order to assist commanders in carrying out their missions.

Colonel Nash joined the Agency in May

1952, for the second time, having left it in December 1949 after service as a Purchasing and Contracting Officer. In January 1950 he was assigned to the Army Task Group that later participated in the Eniwetok atom bomb operation of 1951, where he functioned as Comptroller. Prior to his return to the Agency, he was also an Assistant Fiscal Officer at the Chicago Quartermaster Depot.

Assignments In Korea

Maj. Percy A. Hines has assumed command of the 45th Infantry Division School of Standards.
